HUDSON STREET FIRE INQUEST.

Jury Blames the Trinity Church Corporation for Not Having Fire Escapes.

Coroner Dibble had an inquest, yesterday in the cases of Thomas Molloy, Archibald Grogan, Margaret Ryan, and Mary McMahons, who were killed at the fire at 374 Hudson street on Sunday morning.

Foreman Reilly of Truck No. 9 and Building Inspector Daniel A. O'Toole were the chief witnesses. Frank Bellamy thought that two, and perhaps more, lives might have been saved if the building had had fire escapes.

Inspector O'Toole examined the building after the fire. The partitions in the building, he said, were wooden, and the whole interior was such that fire easily spread about. There had been a back stairway to the building, but this had been torn away to make room for more living apartments. Each of the five victims could have escaped, he said, had this stairway been left.

The verdict of the jury was that the four victims of the fire came to their death from smoke inhalation, due to the want of fire escapes. Trinity Church Corporation of the city of New York, owner of said premises, in failing to provide fire escapes according to law.

The coroner's inquest will take the master up in case of conviction of such negligence a fine of $5,000 can be imposed on the corporation.

Edgar Welch, the fireman attached to Truck 5, who fell from a ladder at the fire, died late Wednesday night in the New York Hospital.
